

GROUP COVENANT

One of the common problems of small group life is commitment degradation. This happens because people are people, and they have good intentions, but not always good follow-through. It is the leader's job to help the group achieve its high ideals and principles in the name of the Lord. One way to do this is through values clarification and the establishment of a group covenant to which everybody holds each other accountable. The following form can be filled out during a special group session in which everyone mutually agrees to the group's goals, and then agrees to be held accountable to the commitment.
